

Less Time on Inventory Management Means More Time for Proposals, Projects – and Growth

O.J. Laughlin Plumbing Co., Inc., in Valley Park, Mo., just outside St. Louis, has automated inventory ordering, management, and stock levels for over 10 years using Hodes Co.'s Stock Service System. Putting inventory management on autopilot has freed up O.J. Laughlin managers to concentrate on other important business and revenue opportunities such as warehouse expansion, hiring and coaching, and most importantly – new proposals, projects, and service delivery.

T.J. Laughlin, warehouse manager at O.J. Laughlin Plumbing Co., Inc., loves inventory management.

And not just because good inventory management is vital to plumbing tech productivity, and critical to customer satisfaction, and essential for overall company profitability.

It's mainly because he spends so little time on it, and rarely has to troubleshoot it, fix it, or think about it.

"Inventory management is really one of the easiest parts of my job, thanks to the Hodes Stock Service System," T.J. said. "Our parts inventory is tracked, ordered, delivered, and accounted for so I never really have to worry about it. It keeps us perfectly balanced between not too little and not too much."

What's the difference between too little and too much? The biggest concern is not having enough of the right parts on hand to dispatch trucks and techs to the homes and businesses that need them. The next biggest concern: inventory bloat that ties up working capital that could otherwise be used for bills, payroll, and other expenses. Cash is critical

With significant annual growth over the last 10 years, the stakes continue to go up. More growth means more inventory, more expense, and more risk. The Stock Service System is one more insurance policy against understocking, overstocking and misplacement.

and careful use of it can mean the difference between profits and losses.

"We've got a long family business tradition here and we want to do everything we can to keep it healthy and growing on our watch," T.J. said. "Hodes helps us do that by controlling expenses, lowering stress, and freeing us up to do other things that drive long-term success like completing more service calls, finding new construction projects, and simply keeping up with it all."

More Growth Means More Inventory – And the Need for More Risk Management

Though O.J. Laughlin has had its Stock Service System in place for more than 10 years now, T.J. says the value of the system becomes greater every year.

"With significant annual growth over the last 10 years, the stakes continue to go up," T.J. said. "More growth means more inventory, more expense, and

PAINS & GAINS

Pains

- O.J. Laughlin Plumbing Co. must keep up with constant growth and expansion.
- New proposals, projects, and facility expansion are high-value tasks that take more time.
- Keeping up with it all is a daily challenge for O.J. Laughlin managers.

Gains

- Hodes Co.'s Stock Service System minimizes time spent on inventory.
- Managers stay focused and spend more time where it's needed most – on new business.
- Guaranteed pricing for six months provides inflation control and one-stop shopping capabilities for speed and convenience.

more risk. The Stock Service System is one more insurance policy against understocking, overstocking and misplacement.”

O.J. Laughlin follows the 80/20 rule, automatically tracking and stocking the top 500 SKUs that drive 80 percent of its business. But automated inventory management can work for any-size shop because it's based on the three main pillars of inventory discipline:

Product. The right mix of products – and their minimum and maximum levels – are determined by careful analysis of service calls, replacements, and customer types.

Price. Costs, retail pricing, and appropriate margin levels are consistently tracked, evaluated, and updated.

Place. Bins, labels, and the location within the warehouse keep things organized and readily accessible.

The Stock Service Systems is a time machine – it takes care of inventory and gives me back time to work on other high value tasks like proposals, pricing, and special projects.

- T.J. Laughlin, O.J. Laughlin Plumbing Co.

These fundamentals ensure the operational, functional, and financial needs of the business are being met.

More Time for More Growth – With Built-In Inflation Control

New projects, new people, and several facility expansions have required the whole team at O.J. Laughlin to rise to the challenge. Because T.J. runs the hub of operations – warehouse, storage, and inventory – he's arguably had to adapt most quickly to the increased responsibilities and time demands that come along with new growth opportunities.

“The Stock Service Systems is a time machine – it takes care of inventory and gives me back time to work on other high value tasks like proposals, pricing, and special projects,” T.J. said.

With inflation spiking in many areas of the economy, T.J. also likes the fact that pricing within the Stock Service System is locked in for six months at a time. The software also comes with a quick-reference printed catalog that makes it easy for anyone in the shop to look up parts numbers, pricing and pictures when needed.

“Prices are rising fast everywhere but Hodes keeps pricing fair and consistent across the board, in their catalog, in their inventory software, and in their shipping,” T.J. said. “We can consolidate our purchases, manage one primary relationship, and know that Hodes has our back.”
